The conclusion will pull the main themes together and summarize the terms of the debate in relation to the processes of educationalization and issues regarding Protestantism and Catholicism. In his eyes, Pestalozzi and the Educationalization of the World (Palgrave Pivot) method was the fulfilment of all aspirations and hopes connected to education and schooling, the ideal tool to fabricate the future citizen, the model for easy and effective mass education and a promise for a decent life. This ideological bias – the idea of dispassionate reason as a condition of good politics and the actual importance of the discredited commerce, connected to passions – had to be solved in order to legitimate the systems of political power, which depended more and more on money for instance, to cover the rising costs of the massive expansion of administration or for the standing armies with their mercenaries.
