Stax stayed friendly—maybe too friendly—with the loan guy at Union Planters National Bank. They weren't searching for fried chicken.

If you're interested in the soul music of the 60's and 70's, Respect Yourself by Jim Stewart and his sister Estelle Stewart Axton created Satellite Records, making their home in a former movie theater to run not only their studio but also a record store out of. In depth, comprehensive, and blessedly written with a voice and with emotion. If I had to pinpoint the moment I initially got interested in soul music, it was probably in when the CD player in my car shot craps and I was stuck listening to the radio.

A white brother and sister build a monument to racial harmony in blighted South. This is a story that could have been worked into Respect Yourself. As I read the book, I couldn't shake the urge to bust out some of my older Stax stuff for the commute to work, which shows how well a lot of Stax stuff has held up, 40 years after it was initially pressed.
